Turn of the Century Farmstead

Funkstown Vicinity

private

This house sheathed with German siding and a frame bank barn are an example of a turn of the century farmstead. The two story, three bay front section of the house may be of log construction while the additions are of frame. While the buildings are undated, their outward appearance, trim and siding suggest the Ca. 1900 date.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This house is located on the east side of Beaver Creek Road just southeast of Funkstown in Washington County, Maryland. The house is situated near the side of the road and faces southwest. It is a two story, three bay building with additions extending to the rear. The entire structure is sheathed with coved or German siding. Thickness of the walls at the doors and windows suggest that main or front section of the building may be of log construction. The four bay, shed roofed wing extending to the rear appears to be of balloon frame construction.

At the front elevation, all windows have two over two pane sashes while most other windows have six over six sashes. They are trimmed with turn of the century period flat topped architraves.

A one story porch supported by turned posts with brackets extends across the front and along the sides of the main section.

The roof is sheathed with sheet metal and extends beyond the end walls of the house. Small brick chimneys with several courses of corbeling are located inside the end walls.

Behind the house is a frame bank barn. The property contains 31.11 acres.
